KnollStudio Outdoor Collection

Since our founding in 1938, Knoll has used modern design to develop furniture that remains relevant in an ever changing world. From Harry Bertoia's iconic mid-century wire seating collection to David Adjaye's contemporary Washington Skeleton™ Chair, our commitment to experimentation has yielded an extensive portfolio of outdoor furniture. Utilizing the latest materials and manufacturing techniques, these designs move easily between indoor and outdoor environments.

Florence Knoll recognized Richard Schultz, an early member of the Knoll product development team, for his innovative design talents. Schultz developed the Petal Table Collection® to complement Harry Bertoia's Diamond Chair. Introduced in 1960, the tables can now be found in the permanent collection of The Museum of Modern Art in New York. Subsequently, Florence Knoll challenged Schultz to create a distinctive outdoor furniture collection. The result, the 1966 Collection®, offered not only the resiliency to withstand the outdoor elements but also the versatility to inhabit an evolving modern architectural environment. Today, the 1966 Collection® is regarded as the first modern outdoor furniture collection and has been the category standard ever since.

KnollStudio is an unparalleled resource for furniture for the workplace and the home with an unwavering belief in the power and utility of modern design. Offering timeless, enduring designs for lounge and reception areas, workplace environments, dining facilities, healthcare organizations and educational institutions, we turn spaces of high visibility into places of comfort and distinction, indoors or out.
